

Student Accommodation

Whether there is accommodation available or not may be one of the factors that potential students are interested in finding out before enrolling on a course. Different colleges and universities may offer a range of possible student accommodation facilities, from modern, self-catering flats, right through to traditional style Halls of Residence or even local families renting rooms. The following notes intend to raise your awareness about this very important matter and help you discover what's available in your area.

STUDENT ACCOMMODATION

Many colleges and universities can provide housing in their own halls of residence or other accommodation that they have arranged. Finding the ideal place to live at college or University can be daunting, but trained staff do all they can to make it easy and enjoyable. Where students live while at university or college is likely to have a major impact on their time there, from the friends they make to and costs with accommodation. It can also be the first time they deal with private landlords, or have to tackle issues such as deposits, bill-sharing and housing management and safety. Being able to provide potential students with this kind of support can help them find the place that's right for them.
